War-Baby, Plastic Is Industrial Giant of Times

CHICAGO—Plastic, the war baby of 15 years ago, is an industrial giant today—and it's still growing.

No other field of chemistry can claim more flux, development, or progress, according to Erik Nielsen, scientific advisor at Armour Research Foundation of Illinois Institute of Technology.

But ramifications of the plastics wonderworld go far beyond the field of chemistry—into building, steel, glass, ceramic, rubber, textile, lumber, and many other industries.

With the amazing development that has transpired since World War II, Nielsen added, it is likely that the future will bring wonders in plastic not even considered today.

Among the wide variety of present and possible user are:

Plastic sheets under concrete foundations to protect them from moisture penetration.

Plastic piping for water and gas lines.

Plastic tiles for floors and walls.

Plastic paints, plastic insulation, and plastic foams for mattresses and furniture.

Plastic furniture, cabinets, and bathroom fixtures.

Plastic reinforced glass for natural and artificial lighting.

Plastic prefabricated houses.

Up until World War II, Nielsen pointed out, plastics were known only by such names as celluloid, bakelite, nylon, and neoprene. Many people considered the field has realized complete development.

Much credit for expanded work in the field goes to the Germans, he said, who were looking for substitutes for materials whose supply lines had been cut off.

Russia Has More Women Engineers

CHICAGO — What does Russia have that we don't have? Women engineers, for one thing.

"Over a quarter of Russia's technological personnel are women," said Dr. Frank D. Carvin, director of the mechanical engineering department at Illinois Institute of Technology. "Our percentage of women engineers is infinitesimal in comparison.

"There is no reason why women scientists, technicians and engineers in the United States cannot step in to help fill the gap caused by our long-range shortage of engineers."

Assistant professor Lois Graham teaches both men and women in mechanical engineering — a field where thermodynamics and heat power meet fluid mechanics and metallurgy.

"The very fact that women engineers are being offered the same high salaries as men engineers shows that we finally are coming into our own in what for years has been considered a man's field," Miss Graham said.

Joys of Owning Pets Outweighs Any Danger

CHICAGO—The joy that children receive from pets, particularly dogs and cats, far outweighs the danger incurred from bites and disease that the animals may inflict on them.

This was revealed in an article by Dr. Hugh A. Carithers, of Jacksonville, "Fla., appearing in the Journal of Diseases of Children.

The report noted no serious or lasting effects to 197 children who had been bitten by one of 10 species of animals during a 20-month study.

The majority of the children bitten were between the ages of 2 and 10 years. "This is during the time when parental protection wanes and the adventuresome spirit takes over," said Dr. Carithers. He added, "After the 10th year a child has attained considerable discretion in handling animals."

Busy Northerners Have High Dandruff Rate

NEW YORK—Your chances of being bothered by dandruff are greater if you live in a large Northern city and have a responsible job in a tension-producing business, according to the first nationwide survey of its kind ever made. Farmers, on the other hand, have the least dandruff problem, especially if they live in a temperate climate.

A sampling of barber shops, beauty salons, and drug stores was polled in 50 major, medium and smaller cities.

Land Limited

NEW YORK—Only 7 per cent of the land area, or 2 per cent of the total surface of our planet, is fully suited to agricultural production, notes a report of the Twentieth Century Fund. When the earth doesn't meet their requirements, tiller of the soil must either comprise with the existing environment or try to change it.
